

<h2>Ideas</h2>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ I understood your message perfectly ○ You wrote more than one sentence on the same topic. That's what I call focused. ○ I can picture your dog perfectly. You painted a picture for me with your details. ○ Are there really dogs that do not bark? I did not know that! I learned something from your paper. ○ I love this topic. Where did you get your idea?
<h2>Organization</h2>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ I could follow this from beginning to end. I never felt lost! ○ You started with one topic-mosquitoes-and you stayed with it through the whole paper. That's what I call being focused. ○ This ending was a real surprise. Surprises make writing interesting. ○ I noticed you used a word here-meanwhile-to connect ideas. Word bridges like this really help me as a reader. ○ I like the way you started your paper, helping me picture the turtle. That was a good lead. ○ You began with a problem-the short recess- and then you came up with a solution-having recess instead of lunch. That's a good way to organize information.
<h2>Voice</h2>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ I loved reading this. I read it twice. That's voice. ○ I could really tell how you felt when your dog ran away. ○ I had to read this aloud. Then I could really hear your voice. ○ You write like you mean it. I like that. ○ You write as if you care how the reader feels. ○ I can tell you care about his topic and you want me to care, too. ○ This sounded like you and no one else. That's a sign of voice. ○ This moment right here (point it out) really caught my attention.
<h2>Word Choice</h2>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ This is the perfect word-slimy. I can feel that myself! ○ Right here you said, "I raced home." Raced is a powerful verb. It has energy. ○ Your word choice-creepy, scary-really gives your paper voice. ○ I think this word-delicate-is a new one for you. I love it when you use a word you haven't used before. ○ Every word you used made sense to me and helped me understand your message. ○ You write as if you love words.

Possible Conferring Prompts For 6 Traits